About the South Carolina Governor's School for Agriculture

The South Carolina Governor's School for Agriculture at John de la Howe (JDLH) is a public residential high school focused on providing a unique and challenging agricultural education program. Located in McCormick, S.C., on 1,310 acres of forest and farmland, students in grades 10–12 have the opportunity to receive hands-on training in agribusiness, forestry, equipment operation, land management, food science, and more. Summer camps, in-person fieldtrips, and adult learning opportunities are a fundamental element of the school's youth and community involvement. Learn more at delahowe.sc.gov.

About the South Carolina Governor's School for the Arts and Humanities

Located in Greenville, the South Carolina Governor's School for the Arts and Humanities cultivates young artists from across the state through pre-professional training in creative writing, dance, drama, music and visual arts. In the public residential high school, students refine their talents in an arts-centered community while receiving a nationally recognized academic education. Summer programs are available for rising seventh- through 12th-grade students. The Governor's School also serves as a resource to teachers and students across South Carolina through comprehensive outreach programs that bring together artists, educators, community organizations and schools. Learn more at scgsah.org.

About the South Carolina Governor's School for Science & Mathematics

The South Carolina Governor's School for Science & Mathematics (GSSM) is a nationally ranked top 10 public high school that exists to bring world-class STEM education to students across the state. Founded in 1988 by Gov. Carroll Campbell, GSSM is a state resource that offers a variety of programs including an intensive two-year residential high school, online courses, summer camps, and in-school experiences for students in 3rd through 12th grades.
