/EINPresswire.com/ -- Caroline Farah Lembck, Founder and CEO of LemVega Capital, has been formally accepted into the Young Entrepreneur Council (YEC), an invitation-only community of high-performing entrepreneurs under 45 who have demonstrated significant business success, leadership, and impact.

YEC is known for its rigorous selection standards and global network of founders responsible for scaling companies across industries. Members gain access to a private peer community, strategic collaboration opportunities, and national media platforms designed to amplify thought leadership and long-term growth.

Caroline joins YEC as she continues expanding LemVega Capital into a diversified, multi-jurisdictional investment platform spanning hedge funds, venture capital, private equity, real assets, and strategic financial infrastructure. Headquartered in Puerto Rico, the firm operates within a cross-border framework built to integrate capital formation, regulatory architecture, and institutional-grade execution.

Her acceptance into YEC reflects not only measurable business performance, but her broader vision of building durable financial institutions designed to operate through economic cycles, regulatory shifts, and global market volatility.

"Building at scale requires more than ambition — it requires endurance, discipline, and structural thinking," said Lembck. "YEC represents a community of founders who understand what it means to carry responsibility at a high level. I'm honored to join a network of entrepreneurs committed to long-term value creation.”

As a YEC member, Caroline will collaborate with fellow founders across industries, contribute insights on capital strategy and multi-jurisdictional structuring, and participate in curated forums focused on sustainable growth and operational excellence.
