"I write about three-toed sloths, and war, and how hard it is to be alive right now," Gordon said, "sometimes in the same poem. I'm thrilled to launch this new book with my beloved Forbes Library."

A prize-winning author, Gordon writes with a naturalist's eye and political conscience, finding in the creatures and weathers of the world a precise language for grief, wonder, and the stubborn human need for grace. Her accessible poetry, warm-hearted and deep, reaches out to a range of readers.

"Loosestrife for Porcupines" is also available from Walmart.com and BooksAMillion.com, among others.

Gordon is also author of "Fourth World" (Adastra Press) and "Nightly, at the Institute of the Possible" (Hedgerow Books), the latter a finalist for the Massachusetts Book Award.
