The awards reflect strong listing performance in the Chesterfield and Greater Richmond housing market, where sellers continue to navigate changing conditions.

Keller Williams Metro Center is one of the largest brokerages in the region, with more than 1,000 agents across nine locations serving over 6,000 families. The brokerage closed more than $3 billion in sales volume in the past year and ranks as the fifth-largest brokerage in the Washington, D.C., area, according to the Washington Business Journal.

“These awards reflect the trust our clients place in us and the consistency of our process,” said Matthew Henry, team leader of Henry Team Real Estate. “In a changing market, results come from preparation, clear communication, and putting the client’s goals first every time.”

The recognition highlights the team’s focus on listing performance in the Chesterfield and Greater Richmond market. By emphasizing property preparation, targeted marketing, and structured feedback, the team has positioned its listings to compete effectively.

The Community Service Award underscores the team’s ongoing involvement in supporting local initiatives and serving beyond real estate transactions.
