

Beauty Chain Capital Enters Beauty Contract Manufacturing with Launch of U.S. Platform

DALLAS, TX, UNITED STATES, April 1, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Beauty Chain Capital, an investment platform focused on the beauty and personal care supply chain, today announced the launch of Beauty Chain Manufacturing, a vertically integrated, U.S.-based manufacturing platform designed to deliver speed, scale, and control for today's leading beauty brands.

Located in Reno, Nevada, the state-of-the-art facility spans more than 100,000 square feet and supports high-volume production across skincare, haircare, and color cosmetics. The platform enables brand partners to move from concept to shelf with greater speed, efficiency, and control.

The fully integrated model includes:

- Full in-house formulation across liquids and powders
- Large-scale compounding and high-speed filling capabilities
- Turnkey services – Component sourcing/customization
- Quality assurance, quality control, and regulatory compliance
- Integrated warehousing, direct-to-consumer, and B2B fulfillment
- Pending OTC certification

“Beauty Chain Manufacturing was built to solve the exact problems brands face today—lack of control, long lead times, and inconsistent quality,” said Derek Harvey, Co-Founder of Beauty Chain Capital. “We disrupted the packaging industry with FusionPKG, and we’re now doing the same in contract manufacturing. For too long, brands have relied on overseas partners for innovation—that model is changing. We’re delivering that same level of innovation with greater speed, flexibility, and control, all based in the U.S. This is a defining moment for brands to take ownership of their supply chains, and we’re positioned to lead that shift.”

The launch of Beauty Chain Manufacturing marks a significant step in Beauty Chain Capital's strategy to build a next-generation supply chain platform—bringing together manufacturing, packaging, technology and fulfillment into a more scalable and cohesive model.

“Brands today are operating in a fundamentally different environment than they were even five years ago,” said Jonathan Gross, Co-Founder of Beauty Chain Capital. “Speed-to-market, quality control, and supply chain visibility are no longer advantages—they are requirements. Beauty Chain Manufacturing was built from the ground up to meet those demands at scale.”

In addition to advanced automation and production capabilities, the facility is strategically located in a business-friendly, low-cost operating environment—providing meaningful advantages in efficiency, regulatory flexibility, and scalability.

“On top of the incredible, purpose-built facility, manufacturing in a low-cost, low-regulation environment gives us a meaningful competitive edge,” added Jonathan Gross. “We are able to deliver the speed and quality brands expect, without the constraints that have historically pushed production overseas.”

The platform is designed to serve a broad range of customers, from emerging brands seeking speed and flexibility to established global companies looking to diversify and de-risk their supply chains.

With significant capacity and end-to-end capabilities, Beauty Chain Manufacturing is positioned to play a central role in Beauty Chain Capital’s broader platform strategy across the beauty and personal care supply chain.
