

Aurora Rangel de Alba Advocates for Sustainable Equestrian Living in Wellington, Florida

Aurora Rangel de Alba, Wellington property owner, shares her commitment to sustainable equestrian living and community engagement in Palm Beach Point.

WELLINGTON, FL, UNITED STATES, April 2, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Aurora Rangel de Alba, a property owner in the Palm Beach Point community of Wellington, Florida, has announced her participation in ongoing local efforts to address environmental and land use challenges affecting equestrian properties in the area. Aurora Rangel de Alba joins a growing number of Wellington residents who have engaged with local authorities and community organizations to promote sustainable land use practices in one of Florida's premier equestrian destinations.

This community has given me so much, and I am committed to protecting the equestrian lifestyle that makes Wellington truly unique.”

Aurora Rangel de Alba

Wellington, Florida is home to thousands of horses and ranks among the most recognized equestrian communities in the United States. Aurora Rangel de Alba notes that the continued growth of the region presents both opportunities and challenges for property owners who depend on a stable and healthy environment to maintain their equestrian operations.

As part of her community involvement, Aurora Rangel de Alba has connected with members of the Palm Beach Point

Property Owners Association to discuss concerns related to zoning, environmental standards, and quality of life for equestrian residents. She has expressed support for increased dialogue between property owners and local government to ensure that future development decisions reflect the needs of the equestrian community.

Aurora Rangel de Alba has stated her intention to continue participating in community forums and public discussions focused on the long-term sustainability of Wellington's equestrian identity. She believes that proactive engagement from residents is essential to preserving the character of the community for future generations.
