programs.

The agency also works with businesses to create or strengthen employee benefits programs, helping employers enhance their offerings and better support recruitment and retention. Dowd serves a broad client base that includes business owners, professionals, families, and individuals seeking a more personalized approach to insurance and financial decision-making.

Launching in May, ELDI's new seminar series will offer both live and pre-recorded sessions through the company's website. The educational programming is designed to give individuals practical guidance on insurance, retirement planning, income protection, and related financial topics in a clear, accessible format. The seminar series will launch May 1, with registration and full details available on the company's website.

Drawing from personal experience, Dowd said the business was shaped after witnessing the financial strain a chronic illness placed on a loved one's retirement and long-term security. That experience underscored the importance of proactive planning and led her to build a company focused on helping others protect their financial future through informed decisions made before challenges arise.

"At Emma Lynn Dowd Insurance, the goal is to help people make the money they worked hard for work hard for them," said Dowd. "This is about offering thoughtful solutions, education, and personal guidance so clients can protect their future and make decisions with greater clarity."

As an independent broker, Dowd is not limited to a single carrier, allowing her to focus on matching clients with solutions based on their goals, budget, and circumstances. That flexibility, combined with a broad service offering, positions ELDI as a one-stop resource for clients seeking both protection and long-term planning support.

ELDI is licensed in Florida and also serves clients in Texas, Ohio, and California through Emma Dowd's individual licensing. In addition to its insurance and financial services, the company recently launched the ELDI Quarterly Radio Show and Newsletter, extending its educational mission through ongoing commentary and expert-driven conversations across business, financial, insurance, health, leisure, and lifestyle topics.
