This is the only kind of crazy I'll sign up for. We're making activism fun, weird, and totally relatable.”

Justina Adorno, Co-star of Green Goddesses Take New York

Starring Justina Adorno (Mayans M.C., Grand Hotel) and activist/actress Jamie Logan (The Next Girl), the unscripted series is a bold cocktail of raw humor and animal liberation. From getting body-painted as endangered fish to dodging "Karens" in Manhattan, the duo's mission to wake up New York City has resonated with both industry critics and global audiences.

The Race for the Top: Two Ways to Vote

With the show now recognized by the two most influential bodies in digital and television excellence, UNCHAINEDTV is calling on all animal lovers and supporters of animal rights and independent filmmaking to help propel these "Goddesses" to the finish line.

A New Frontier for Activism
Directed by Jordan Ehrlich and produced by UNCHAINEDTV and CaveLight Films, the pilot captures Adorno and Logan as they navigate the chaos of Times Square and Washington Square Park. Described as "Lucy and Ethel meet guerrilla street theater," the show uses comedy to dismantle barriers around serious ethical issues.

"Humor is a great way to break down walls and get people to think differently about their daily habits," says UnchainedTV President Jane Velez-Mitchell. "This laugh-out-loud adventure will leave people with a new perspective."

Justina Adorno shares the sentiment: "This is the only kind of crazy I'll sign up for. We're making activism fun, weird, and totally relatable."
