

The Longevity Industry's Premier Leadership Conference Returns to Los Angeles With 300 Founders, Clinicians & Investors

The Healthspan Collective & Mission Matters bring the longevity industry's most consequential conversations back to the Verizon Innovation Lab on April 30, 2026

PLAYA VISTA, CA, UNITED STATES, April 8, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Healthspan Collective and Mission Matters today announced the return of the Third Annual Longevity Leadership Conference to the Verizon Innovation Lab. The one day gathering will bring together more than 300 leaders and decision-makers actively shaping the longevity industry, including physicians, investors, researchers, and healthcare professionals.

Longevity Leadership Conference 2026

Every meaningful shift in human culture started with a small group of people who trusted each other enough to think out loud. That's what we've built here”

Elias Arjan, Founder of the Healthspan Collective

The event has carved out its own category as a large-scale industry mastermind, structured for forward-thinking conversations and strategic collaborations at the frontier of longevity medicine and innovation.

“Every meaningful shift in human culture started with a small group of people who trusted each other enough to think out loud. That's what we've built here,” said Elias Arjan, Founder and Chief Community Officer of the Healthspan Collective. “The Longevity Leadership Conference brings together the clinicians, founders, and investors actively shaping the next era of healthspan forming lasting relationships and connecting capital to innovation, all in the premise to move the industry forward, together.”

Attendees will hear from keynote speakers and expert panels, participate in curated discussions, and engage directly with the founders and clinicians defining the next generation of longevity care. A select group of exhibiting brands and technologies will showcase emerging tools and platforms advancing the longevity ecosystem.

"The longevity industry is producing some of the most important science and innovation of our time focused on preventative medicine, yet most of it isn't reaching the people who need to hear it," said Chirag Sagar, Co-Founder of Mission Matters Media. "The Longevity Leadership Conference through our partnership with the Healthspan Collective is set to change that by connecting the old guard of healthcare with the innovation taking place to amplify the voices building meaningful change."

Speakers

This year's conference features the Healthspan Collective's founding patrons — three companies at the cutting-edge of evidence-based longevity — each represented on the impressive XR Stage.

Paola Telfer, CEO of Sens.ai, will speak on the science of brain aging and the recent landmark publication of BrainYears™ — the world's first EEG-based biological brain age clock, developed in collaboration with the Buck Institute for Research on Aging. In real-world use, Sens.ai users reduced their functional brain age by an average of 5.18 years in 56 days.

Sanjiv Lal and Dr. Arvind Chakravarthy, Co-founders of Regen Therapy, will speak on the frontier of regenerative medicine and the clinical science behind RegenQuantum, a DNA-free, clinically engineered formulation designed to reset cellular receptors and restore signaling precision at the cellular level. It's a distinction that positions Regen Therapy at the forefront of what evidence-based regenerative therapy can look like in clinical practice. They will share both about the science and the infrastructure required to bring this class of intervention to patients at scale.

Ashley Hines, Clinical Skincare Educator at Routine Skin, will address the role of skin health as a biological marker of aging and the clinical science behind peptide-driven cellular repair. Routine's Rescue+ Serum is formulated with the highest GHK-Cu copper peptide concentration available in a consumer product and Hines will dive into why concentration is the critical variable between a
