Burns Mission is to Meet the Growing Need for Comprehensive and Affordable Financial Education and Estate Planning Services for Young Adults to Mid-Career Entrepreneurs, Executives, and Retirees

Deborah Pratt Burns, long-time Fairfield resident, personal finance educator and mentor, and experienced power of attorney and estate executor, today announced the launch of her first-of-its-kind Financial Education and Estate Planning Consultancy. Her Consultancy is comprised of three independent attorneys, licensed in Connecticut, New York, and Florida, and operates under Literacy to Legacy Mentors, Burns’s personal finance education and mentoring company. Burns and her law partners will provide clients with comprehensive and affordable financial education, trusts and estates planning guidance, and elder law and real estate law, tax strategy and accounting, and college financial aid advisory services.

“My mission is to help our clients to better understand the estate planning process and make more informed and confident decisions knowing all of their options,” said Burns. She added, “With the Great Wealth Transfer currently underway, an unprecedented intergenerational shift of trillions of dollars, individuals, couples, and families are seeking expert advice, and we stand ready to meet that growing need.” According to CNBC, “open discussions about financial literacy and family legacy planning play a significant role in preparing the next generation to responsibly manage inherited wealth.”
