

'The Tester AI' Debuts to Verify How Artificial Intelligence Performs on Professional and Personal Tasks

An independent evaluation site dedicated to scoring AI on real tasks - we don't hype AI, we test it!

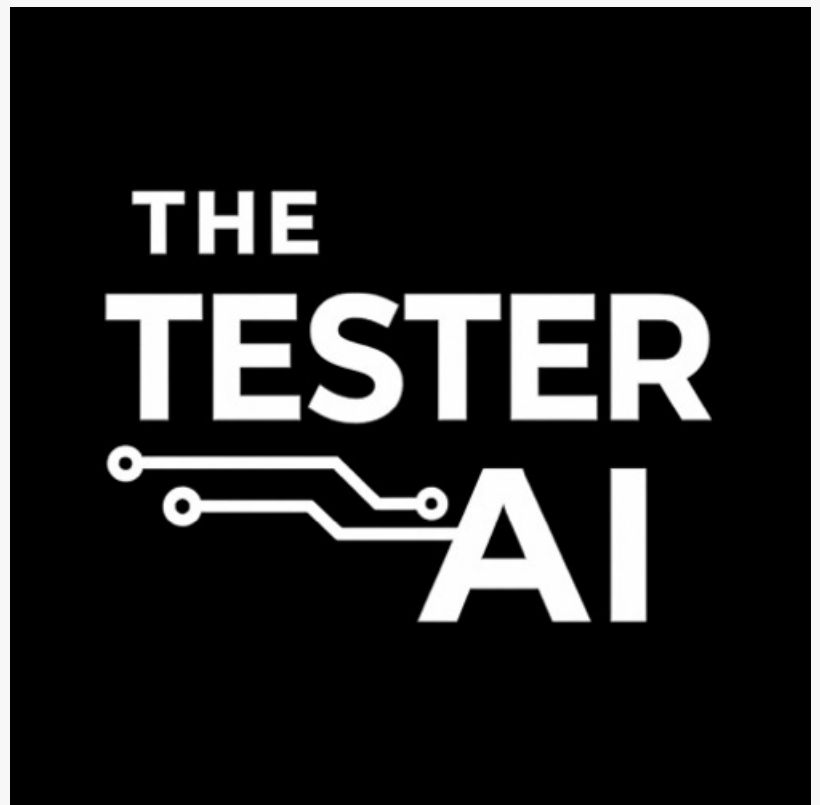

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, April 15, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Every day, new claims emerge that AI can replace analysts, consultants, and entire teams. But bold promises and polished demos are not the same as real-world performance. The Tester AI is a new website dedicated to real-world testing of AI capabilities across both professional and personal functions.

The site runs AI through genuine tasks and professional functions like whether AI can replace an accountant or produce a logo kit, as well as everyday home and personal challenges like whether AI can do your math homework — using widely accessible consumer AI tools. Each test is conducted using real data and constraints, culminating in a transparent performance score.

The site is candid about AI's limitations. Hallucinations, inconsistent outputs, and real-world constraints mean the technology that dazzles in demos does not always hold up when it matters. The Tester AI exists to close that gap — giving individuals and organizations an honest picture of where AI genuinely adds value, and where it still falls short.

The platform was founded by Niv Nissenson, a CFO and entrepreneur with over 15 years of experience across startups, commercial companies, and Nasdaq-listed firms. Having served as CFO of two U.S. public companies, Nissenson co-founded Added Capital, a firm specializing in CFO services, capital raising, and financial technology.

The Tester AI serves as a natural evolution of Nissenson's AI explorations. Nissenson's The CFO AI blog, launched last year, focuses on how artificial intelligence is specifically reshaping the world of high-level finance.

The Tester AI is live now at www.thetesterai.com. New test reviews are published on an ongoing basis.
