entrepreneurial spirit, company growth, purpose, and long-term value creation.

“We are honored to be recognized as finalists for Entrepreneur Of The Year,” said Clark T. Bell, CEO of Nano-Yield. “This recognition reflects the dedication of our entire team and our commitment to advancing sustainable agriculture through innovative, science-driven solutions that help growers achieve stronger yields and long-term success. We are grateful to our employees, customers, and partners who have supported our journey and helped us achieve meaningful growth.”

Founded in 2014, Nano-Yield is an agricultural technology company pioneering the use of nanotechnology to transform crop performance and sustainability. Its proprietary solutions are designed to improve nutrient delivery at the plant level, enabling farmers to increase yields while reducing environmental impact. Serving a growing network of agricultural partners, Nano-Yield has gained recognition for its science-driven approach and measurable field results. Under the leadership of Clark Bell, Mike Bullock, and Warren Bell, the company continues to scale its impact across modern agriculture, positioning itself at the forefront of next-generation crop innovation.

The Entrepreneur Of The Year program honors business leaders for their ingenuity, courage, and entrepreneurial spirit. This year's Mountain West finalists represent Colorado, Idaho, Oregon, Utah, and Washington across a range of industries, including technology, consumer products, manufacturing, and healthcare.

Regional award winners will be announced on Thursday, June 18, 2026, during a special celebration in Colorado Springs, Colorado. Winners will become lifetime members of the Entrepreneur Of The Year alumni community and will advance to national consideration at the Strategic Growth Forum® in November.
