“Travis and I have visited Savannah both as Georgia residents and as out of state travelers over the years, so expanding into a town we hold so dear has been a dream,” says Azie Shelhorse, co-founder of the boutique lodging brand.

The four Savannah properties are renowned for their individual elegance and historical importance. Kehoe

House, a beautifully restored 1892 Renaissance Revival mansion, offers an adult-exclusive luxury experience. The Gastonian consists of two adjoining Regency-Italianate-style mansions built in 1868, known for their intimate and romantic atmosphere. The Eliza Thompson House, dating back to 1847, remains one of Savannah's most enchanting inns, famous for its picturesque courtyard.

East Bay Inn, housed in an industrial warehouse circa 1852, captures the city's historic commercial spirit. As part of the brand's ongoing commitment to stewardship, {verdigrreen} hotels is now beginning renovations on East Bay Inn to meticulously restore its historic charm, ensuring the property's rich legacy is preserved for future generations of travelers.

This expansion not only grows the {verdigrreen} footprint but also reinforces a deep dedication to preserving and celebrating landmark properties. The company is excited to steward these beloved inns, integrating signature hospitality while honoring the unique legacy of each building.
