

ATELIC AI secures Oskar Mencer as board advisor, as they continue scaling Agentic AI adoption for Enterprise customers

As Atelic continues to grow its presence in the GCC, EU & Americas, it is further boosted by the addition of its newest advisor, Oskar Mencer, PhD (Stanford).

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES, May 5, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Oskar is a globally respected technologist and entrepreneur with a distinguished track record & career in high-performance computing, advanced system architectures and industry-leading innovation.

He is the founder and long-time CEO of Maxeler Technologies, a pioneering dataflow computing company that has influenced the evolution of next-generation computing architectures and was acquired by Groq, whose technology was recently licensed by Nvidia, in Nvidia's largest deal to-date.

Oskar now calls Dubai home and is currently a fellow with the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority (ADIA).

"We are thrilled to welcome Oskar to Atelic's Advisory Board," said Ben Owen, CEO and Founder of Atelic. "His deep technical expertise, visionary leadership and decades of experience bringing breakthrough computing solutions to market is an asset as we scale our enterprise AI strategy and help organisations tackle real-world challenges with secure, efficient, and impactful AI solutions.

In his role on the Advisory Board, Oskar will provide strategic counsel on market alignment, technology, product-market fit, and ecosystem partnerships. His insights will help guide Atelic's
