“These two organizations bring important perspectives and expertise to our membership,” said Theresa Dreyer, Task Force CEO. “Amazon One Medical’s work to transform primary care through accessible, tech-enabled care and Ceresti Health’s leadership in dementia care to support patients and caregivers will contribute meaningfully to our shared priorities.”

“At Amazon One Medical, we are redefining primary care through human-centered, technology-enabled primary care that expands access and improves outcomes,” said Keith Shah, Chief Network Officer at Amazon One Medical. “We are honored to join the Task Force and collaborate with organizations working to improve patient outcomes and reduce total cost of care.”

“Dementia is the most expensive, most complex condition in value-based care — and across every model from Medicare Advantage capitation to GUIDE to whatever CMMI builds next, the variable that decides whether it works is the activated family caregiver. That’s the clinical lever, and it’s the economic one,” said Rhonda Quintana, Chief Revenue Officer at Ceresti Health. “Joining the Task Force gives us a seat alongside the payers, providers, and purchasers shaping that next generation.”
