

Christian Dior Data Incident Settlement Opens Claims Process for Eligible Individuals

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, May 5, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ --

Individuals who received notice regarding the January 2025 Christian Dior data incident may be eligible to submit a claim under a proposed class action settlement before the filing deadline.

A proposed class action settlement has been announced in Michael Toikach, et al. v. Christian Dior, Inc., Case No. CACE 25-18776, pending in the Circuit Court for Broward County, Florida. According to the official settlement website, the case concerns a January 2025 cybersecurity incident in which an unauthorized party gained access to a Dior database containing certain customer information. Dior denies wrongdoing, and the settlement was reached to avoid the costs and uncertainty of continued litigation.

The settlement website states that the information involved may have included customer names, contact information, addresses, dates of birth, government identification numbers, and, in a limited number of cases, Social Security numbers. Individuals who received notice that their information may have been affected may be members of the settlement class.

Under the proposed settlement, eligible class members may submit claims for certain benefits. According to the official claim information, class members who experienced documented losses related to the incident may seek reimbursement of up to $1,500, subject to the terms of the settlement. In addition, settlement class members whose Social Security numbers were impacted in the incident may be eligible for a $100 cash payment. The settlement materials indicate that reimbursement claims require supporting documentation, while the Tier 1 cash
