Business Law P.C., a Midtown

Manhattan-based legal practice specializing in corporate and startup law, officially announces the formal integration of entrepreneurial venture experience into its core legal advisory frameworks. This initiative is designed to address the specific needs of growth-stage enterprises in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut by providing counsel informed by the practical challenges of founding and funding a technology company.

Weberman Business Law P.C. distinguishes itself by offering a "Founder-to-Attorney" perspective.

Attorney Daniel H. Weberman, who founded a tech startup during the global pandemic and successfully navigated the venture capital landscape before returning to full-time legal practice, utilizes this background to structure founder agreements, angel investment rounds, and seed funding negotiations. This specialized approach ensures that legal strategies are not only compliant with federal and state regulations but are also optimized for the operational agility required by emerging companies.

The integrated framework focuses on four critical pillars of startup development: strategic entity formation, intellectual property protection, employment compliance, and venture financing. The firm's expanded advisory scope includes meticulous due diligence for both investors and startups, the design of equity compensation and stock option plans, and the navigation of
