Why Puppies? Why Now?

For Odd Dog Media, a team of 15 people and 11 dogs, partnering with Oregon Dog Rescue to give away a private Puppy Party Experience to a hardworking business is a natural extension of the agency's people-first (and dogs-first) values.

We know first-hand how much joy a dog can provide, so we thought — what better way to bring some smiles to a local Portland business than a room full of puppies”

Lily Noling

Odd Dog Media has been helping businesses, large and small, for 17+ years. Giving away a free Puppy Party Experience is just one way this local digital marketing agency is recognizing the dedication and contributions that small and mid-sized businesses make to their communities.

While the agency helps businesses across the United States, they know that helping small businesses right in their own neighborhoods cultivates community. With an Odd Dog Media local representative rooted, born and raised in Portland, Odd Dog Media has a deep understanding of the businesses in the area and is more than happy to help Portland businesses with their digital marketing needs.

“We're a digital marketing agency, but we also are just a bunch of dog lovers who care about our community,” said Lily Noling, Portland local representative and marketing specialist at Odd Dog Media. “We know first-hand how much joy a dog can provide, so we thought — what better way to bring some smiles to a local Portland business than a room full of puppies?”

For businesses, puppy parties offer a number of benefits: reducing team stress, boosting morale and supporting team bonding. In this case, it’s also an opportunity to connect with a local nonprofit organization and foster a sense of community.

The event is also designed to spotlight Oregon Dog Rescue and its mission to find loving homes for dogs across the Pacific Northwest. A resource table with information on adoption, volunteer opportunities and ways to support the organization will be present at the private event. The total value of the giveaway ($750) goes to Oregon Dog Rescue.
