Unlocking Pet-Friendly Travel for the Caribbean

Caribbean Week in New York is the Caribbean tourism industry's premier gathering, convening ministers, commissioners, tourism directors, and private-sector leaders to shape the future of regional travel. This year's programme covers tourism leadership, destination marketing, airlift expansion, sustainability, and next-generation innovation — the ideal stage for PadsPass to present its case for transforming how pets and their pet parents navigate international travel.

Brown will address how fragmented, paper-based pet travel documentation systems create friction for airlines, hotels, and travellers alike — and how PadsPass's digital platform resolves compliance challenges across the key jurisdictions where Caribbean tourism operates, including Bermuda, the United States, Puerto Rico, Canada, and Mexico, as well as major international gateways including London Heathrow and Amsterdam Schiphol.

With 1,400+ pets already registered on the platform, approximately 1,000 app downloads, and 83 veterinary clinics actively using PadsPass CheckPoint, Brown will demonstrate proven traction at a moment of growing industry interest in pet-inclusive travel infrastructure.

About Lauren Anders Brown

Lauren Anders Brown is a Bermuda-based entrepreneur and the CEO and Co-Founder of PadsPass. She holds dual IATA certifications in Live Animals Regulations and Live Animals for Passenger Handling Personnel, and is the named inventor on the PadsPass pet travel compliance platform patent (filed 2025). Prior to founding PadsPass, Brown built an internationally recognized career as a humanitarian documentary filmmaker, with work screened at the Cannes Film Festival across four continents — a background that continues to inform her mission-driven approach to travel that allows for pets to travel safely and protect public health.

About Peru Brown
