"We have never believed that finding a life partner should be left to an algorithm," said Erica

This award is incredibly meaningful because it reflects what we've believed since day one: people don't need more swiping, they need more thoughtful introductions."

Erica Arrechea

Arrechea, Founder of Cinque Matchmaking. "This recognition is especially meaningful because it reflects what our team has focused on every day for more than fifteen years: creating thoughtful introductions, protecting our clients' privacy, and helping exceptional people build meaningful relationships."

Today, Cinque serves clients throughout San Francisco, Los Angeles, Newport Beach, Austin, Dallas, Miami, New York, Puerto Rico, Vancouver BC, and Melbourne, Australia, while maintaining one of the industry's most extensive private networks of eligible singles.

Unlike dating apps, Cinque's process is entirely human led. Every client works directly with experienced matchmakers who personally source, recruit, interview, and vet potential matches. The firm is known for its concierge-style service, discretion, and ability to conduct searches across cities, states, and international markets.

Over the years, Cinque has been featured in ELLE, Goop, Business Insider, Yahoo, HuffPost, FOX, TODAY, and numerous other publications covering relationships, dating, and luxury lifestyle trends.

As the dating industry becomes increasingly automated, Cinque has earned its place among what many consider the "Big 4" of luxury matchmaking, championing a different philosophy: real people creating real connections.
