As workplace expectations shift, this recognition carries added significance. While 62% of middle managers reported increased workloads in 2025, according to Workplace Intelligence, and return-to-office transitions continue to create tension elsewhere, 2020 Companies remains focused on stability. In this environment, organizations that prioritize engagement and trust distinguish themselves as industry leaders.

Everything we do at 2020 Companies is built on trust—trust from our people who choose to build their careers here and from our clients who rely on us to represent their brands.”

Steve Peters, President of 2020 Companies

Methodology and Selection

Forbes and Statista selected America's Best Large Employers 2026 based on an independent survey of more than 217,000 U.S. employees at companies with at least 1,000 people. The analysis included over 3.5 million employer evaluations, incorporating data collected over the past three years to measure sustained excellence.

Respondents evaluated their organizations across key factors, including compensation, work environment, benefits, and career development opportunities. The final rankings recognize 700 companies nationwide. As with all Forbes rankings, companies cannot pay for inclusion; selection is based entirely on independent data and direct employee feedback.

This recognition highlights organizations that are successfully adapting to change while maintaining employee confidence and long-term engagement. Based on these results, 2020 Companies is honored to be included in this year's list.
