The platform introduces a simple, single-order workflow built specifically for business owners, startups, and growing brands who want to scale their public relations and AI discoverability. Press Desk

Press Desk provides an immediate, on-demand solution for companies to access professional media distribution for individual announcements without requiring long-term contracts from day one. By offering a budget-friendly, standalone alternative, the service makes newswire distribution accessible and practical for businesses focused on expanding their digital footprint.

The concept for Press Desk directly addresses recent changes in online visibility. As search engine algorithms shift, third-party media syndication has become a necessary tool for SEO, digital authority, and AI online discoverability. This foundation is especially critical as AI platforms like Google Gemini, ChatGPT, and Claude rewrite how consumers find recommendations; by establishing a credible newswire record, brands ensure they are recognized by large language models and surfaced in conversational search answers.

"Press releases have always been a powerful tool, but they matter more than ever right now for small business growth," said Morgan Doback, Managing Director of Press Desk. "Online search has changed completely over the last 18 months. With Google updating how it ranks content and AI search tools answering conversational questions, brands cannot rely on their own websites alone."

Recent Google algorithm updates heavily favor high-authority domain signals, while new AI search engines pull from established, credible web footprints to recommend companies to users. By placing brand announcements on trusted news networks, Press Desk helps small businesses build the algorithmic trust needed to show up in modern AI search results.

"We are thrilled to open up access to distribution networks that have historically only been available to large corporations and big agencies with massive budgets," added Doback. "Over the years, we have seen firsthand how incredibly powerful wire syndication is for brands when they have the right narrative. Press Desk levels the playing field, giving companies of any size the ability to build immediate credibility on their own terms."

Press Desk is designed to make professional PR more accessible through a streamlined, affordable process. Businesses begin by completing a simple questionnaire outlining their announcement, milestone, or story. From there, experienced publicists craft a professionally written press release designed to highlight the strongest news angle and meet industry standards. Once approved, the release is distributed through major newswire networks to maximize visibility, searchability, and media exposure. By offering one-off press release services without long-term contracts or retainers, Press Desk gives businesses a flexible way to share their news while maintaining full control of their marketing budget.

Press Desk is now available to businesses nationwide seeking an affordable way to share company news, announcements, milestones, and thought leadership through professional press releases and wire distribution.
