We're a boutique, independent firm competing against institutions with virtually unlimited resources. Yet year after year, our clients and community continue to show up for us. That says a lot”

Ben S. Lies, MBA, RSSA

The Best of Clark County awards, hosted annually by The Columbian, recognize standout businesses across a wide range of industries, with voting driven by the local community. In a category dominated by national and regional financial institutions with significantly larger marketing budgets and brand recognition, Delphi Advisers' repeated finalist status reflects a different kind of competitive advantage: trust, consistency, and client results.

“We're not supposed to win popularity contests,” said Ben S. Lies, President and Lead Advisor of Delphi Advisers.

“We're a boutique, independent firm competing against institutions with virtually unlimited resources. Yet year after year, our clients and community continue to show up for us. That says a lot—not only about us, but about the value of personalized, fiduciary advice in a world that often prioritizes scale over substance. We may not win the whole thing, but goliath is going to know we are here.”

Founded on a client-first philosophy, Delphi Advisers focuses on helping individuals and families make better financial decisions over time—often by avoiding the behavioral pitfalls that can erode long-term wealth. The firm emphasizes clarity over complexity, discipline over speculation, and real-world outcomes over marketing narratives.

“Being a finalist three years in a row isn’t luck—it’s consistency,” Lies added. “We’re not chasing headlines, trending strategies, or the latest product pitch. We’re focused on what actually moves the needle for clients over decades, not quarters.”

Unlike many larger institutions, Delphi Advisers operates as a fully independent fiduciary, meaning it is legally and ethically obligated to act in the best interests of its clients at all times. The firm’s approach often challenges conventional industry practices, particularly when it comes to over-engineered investment products, excessive fees, and the behavioral traps that lead investors to underperform their own portfolios.

The firm credits its continued recognition to its clients and community supporters who take the time each year to vote and advocate on its behalf.

“Recognition like this is earned, not bought,” Lies said. “We’re grateful for the trust our clients place in us—and we don’t take it lightly.”
