The integration reflects a broader shift toward workflow-native compliance infrastructure, where regulated verification requirements are embedded directly into the software platforms teams already use.

“Every regulated workflow eventually reaches a moment where trusted human verification matters,” said Anant Agrawal, President of OneNotary. “Construction payments are no different. Our mission is to make credentialed human verification a native part of enterprise software, so customers can complete legally required notarizations in minutes instead of days and get paid faster.”

Built on OneNotary’s enterprise-grade infrastructure, the experience combines API-first technology with a nationwide network of state-credentialed notaries, allowing Procore customers to complete notarized lien waivers without leaving the payment workflow. For remote notarizations, the platform adds enterprise-grade identity verification and a video-recorded session retained for 10 or more years. The result is a faster, more compliant process with a complete digital audit trail that holds up if a payment is ever disputed.

Electronic notarization for lien waivers is now available to Procore Pay customers across the United States.
