

AetherUltra Releases New Album Starborne Voyager — A Journey Beyond the Horizon of Imagination

A voyage through imagination, wonder, and possibility, blending cinematic synthwave, and electronic soundscapes into a journey beyond the edge of the known.

ASHLAND, OR, UNITED STATES, June 8, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Independent electronic music artist AetherUltra has released Starborne Voyager, a 13-track collection of cinematic synthwave, ambient electronic music, cosmic storytelling, and visionary soundscapes, now available on major streaming platforms worldwide.

Starborne Voyager is ultimately about exploration of the possibilities within ourselves. What happens when we choose curiosity over fear, imagination over limitation, and wonder over certainty?”

Released through PlanetWide Broadcast System (PBS), Starborne Voyager invites listeners on a voyage through imagination, resilience, wonder, and possibility. Blending lush synthesizer textures, atmospheric production, and emotionally resonant melodies, the album explores the idea that every meaningful journey begins with a signal—a dream, a question, a curiosity, or a call toward something greater.

The album features thirteen tracks spanning cosmic synth-pop, ambient exploration, electronic storytelling, and cinematic electronic music, including listener favorites "More Fun to Imagine," "Ride the Storm (Wild Mystic)," "Computer Love (In Orbit)," and the title track, "Starborne Voyager."

“Starborne Voyager is ultimately about exploration,” said AetherUltra. “Not just exploration of distant stars or imagined worlds, but exploration of the possibilities within ourselves. Every track began with a question: What happens when we choose curiosity over fear, imagination over limitation, and wonder over certainty?”
