

Suburban Pest Control Celebrates Ralph Rinaldi's Achievement of Associate Certified Entomologist (ACE) Designation

YONKERS, NY, UNITED STATES, June 8, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Suburban Pest Control is proud to announce that longtime team member Ralph Rinaldi has earned his Associate Certified Entomologist (ACE) designation.

Like many in the industry, Rinaldi built his career from the ground up, learning firsthand what it takes to solve real-world pest problems for homeowners and businesses. Over the years, that hands-on experience evolved into leadership, where he now plays a key role in training technicians, developing protocols, and elevating service standards across the company.

Ralph Rinaldi, Service Manager at Suburban Pest Control, earned his Associate Certified Entomologist (ACE) Designation

"Earning the ACE isn't something you stumble into; it takes discipline, study, and a genuine passion for the industry," said Ken Unger, President at Suburban Pest Control. "Ralph represents exactly what we stand for: expertise, integrity, and a relentless drive to be better for our customers every single day."

You start to see problems differently. You make better decisions in the field. And ultimately, you deliver better results for customers. That's what pushed me to do it."

Rinaldi said the process challenged him to deepen his understanding of the science behind the work he's been doing for years. "This wasn't just about passing a test. It was about really understanding the 'why' behind what we do," said Rinaldi. "You start to see problems differently. You make better decisions in the field. And ultimately, you deliver better results for customers. That's what pushed me to do it."

That deeper level of expertise shows up in the results. Whether tackling large-scale infestations or implementing integrated pest management strategies, Rinaldi has consistently demonstrated the ability to combine experience with precision.

The ACE certification, administered by the Entomological Society of America, signifies a high level of proficiency in insect biology, behavior, and control strategies. It's a distinction held by a select group of professionals committed to raising the bar across the industry.

As for Rinaldi, the ACE designation isn't a finish line, it's part of the journey. "The industry is always evolving," he said. "The more you learn, the more you realize there is to learn. That's what keeps it interesting."
