

Most Indianapolis Homeowners Requesting Gutter Cleaning Haven't Had One in Over a Year, Clean Pro Data Shows

Nearly 75% Of Indianapolis homeowners requesting gutter cleaning wanted service within two weeks, a delay-then-rush pattern as Indiana's rainy season Starts

INDIANAPOLIS, IN, UNITED STATES, June 8, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Clean Pro Gutter Cleaning today released findings from its January-May 2026 Indianapolis quote requests, revealing a striking pattern: most local homeowners put off gutter cleaning for a year or more, then scramble to book service the moment they decide to act.

The numbers tell the story. 55% of Indianapolis homeowners requesting quotes had gone more than a year since their last gutter cleaning. Once they reached out, 74% wanted the job done within two weeks.

Homeowners aren't thinking about gutters until something forces the issue — a storm, an overflow, a stain down the siding,”

Jonathan D. Byrd I, Founder and Owner of Clean Pro Gutter Cleaning

That timing matters. The National Weather Service's Indianapolis office maintains a current heavy rain and flooding outlook for central Indiana, with rainfall forecasts and flood outlook products tracking runoff risk as the summer storm season develops.

"Homeowners aren't thinking about gutters until something forces the issue — a storm, an overflow, a stain down the siding," said Jonathan D. Byrd I, Founder and Owner of Clean Pro Gutter Cleaning. "By the time they call us in Indianapolis, the clock is already ticking. That's why we see a year of waiting collapse into a two-week window almost overnight."

The takeaway for Indianapolis homeowners is straightforward: scheduling routine cleaning before the next heavy rain is easier than chasing an appointment after gutters start overflowing, staining exterior surfaces, and dumping water into the soil around the home.

The stakes are not trivial. FEMA says even one inch of water can cause about $25,000 in damage to a home. Clean Pro said that broader water-damage reality helps explain why many homeowners treat gutter overflow as a problem worth fixing quickly once it becomes visible.
