New York is flooded with advertising operations, but a billboard has never stepped inside a courtroom to fight for a verdict”

Mike Karns

The Outer-Borough Reality: Delivery Vans vs. Pedestrian Right-of-Way

The transit landscape across the Manhattan-Brooklyn corridor has reached a boiling point. The massive influx of e-commerce delivery vans, commercial box trucks, and rideshare vehicles navigating high-density gridlock has triggered an unprecedented spike in severe pedestrian crosswalk strikes, bicycle collisions, and multi-vehicle rideshare occupant injuries.

"The streets of New York are completely saturated with commercial delivery fleets racing against tight corporate deadlines," said Bill Karns, founding partner. "When an aggressive delivery truck or rideshare driver strikes a pedestrian in Brooklyn or causes a multi-vehicle pileup in Manhattan, corporate insurers move instantly to protect their bottom lines. They rely on high-volume marketing firms to look for a quick, under-valued settlement. We are here to offer New Yorkers a direct, sophisticated trial alternative."

The Metropolitan Differentiator: Trial Attorneys vs. Advertising Mills
As highway billboards and subway advertisements saturate the New York media market, Karns & Karns cautions the public to closely evaluate a firm's actual courtroom willingness before signing a retainer.
