ABOUT MADDIE HOGAN

Maddie Hogan is a rising country-rock artist whose rich vocals, catchy songwriting, and commanding stage presence are quickly gaining attention throughout the music industry. After receiving a Golden Ticket on Season 15 of American Idol, Hogan built momentum with original music that blends modern country storytelling with rock-and-roll edge. Her song "Beautiful Temporary" won Best Song in a Music Video at the Scotland International Festival of Cinema, and Nashville Music Scene Magazine named her an Artist/Songwriter to Watch in 2025. Hogan was also selected as a Semifinalist in the 2025 International Songwriting Competition for her latest single "Ruin You," and in June 2026 she will perform at the sold-out Barefoot Country Music Fest in Wildwood, New Jersey, sharing a lineup with some of country music's biggest names, including Miranda Lambert.

Maddie Hogan

Originally from Delaware County, Pennsylvania and now based at the Jersey Shore, Hogan's sound reflects both her rock-and-roll roots and her love for melodic country storytelling. Influenced by artists who blur the lines between country, rock, and pop, she has crafted a style that feels both modern and timeless. She collaborates with award-winning producers as she establishes herself as a rising force in the evolving country-rock landscape. With new music on the way, including her upcoming release "Singin With the Howlin Wind," Hogan continues expanding her audience and setting her sights on the festival and touring circuit. As she records her upcoming album — which includes a duet with a fellow Cape May country artist and a heartfelt patriotic ballad honoring the nation's police force — she is steadily carving out a lane entirely her own.
