

For Cancer Patients, a Common Daily Task Gets a Gentler Alternative

Curident's one-step oral care system is now available for patients and caregivers

BOCA RATON, FL, UNITED STATES, June 11, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- During National Cancer Survivors Month, Curident is shining a light on a side effect that affects one in three cancer patients during treatment, yet is rarely discussed — painful, debilitating oral complications that make brushing teeth a daily struggle.

From mucositis and mouth sores to dry mouth and sensitive gum tissue, oral side effects can significantly impact a patient's comfort, nutrition and quality of life. Until now, patients and their caregivers have had few options designed specifically for this need.

Curident

A new option is aiming to fill that gap. The product comes from the team behind ReadyBrush — the original, disposable, pre-pasted toothbrush. Curident is a patent-pending, one-step oral care system formulated for individuals with sensitive and compromised oral tissue. The product launched last month at ONS Congress 2026 in San Antonio, Texas.

Practical Comfort for Patients and Caregivers

When someone you love is undergoing treatments such as chemotherapy, radiation and stem cell transplantation, it can be hard to know what to give. For caregivers searching for something practical, Curident requires no preparation and no cleanup — simply wet, brush and dispose. It can be tucked into a care package, picked up at a hospital gift shop, or ordered online for home delivery.

Each Curident oral care system features:

- Ultra-soft, feathered PBT bristles that clean without irritating tender tissue
- A pre-pasted formula free from sodium lauryl sulfate (SLS) and harsh mint flavoring
- Soothing ingredients, including aloe barbadensis, chamomile and calendula
- Hydroxyapatite, a biocompatible mineral that helps strengthen and remineralize enamel
- Xylitol for moisture support and eugenol, a naturally derived agent that helps ease oral discomfort
- A gentle tutti-frutti flavor, developed for mouths that can no longer tolerate mint
- A single-use, disposable format to reduce bacterial exposure — critical for immunocompromised individuals

Designed with Patients in Mind

“Something as simple as brushing your teeth can become a painful, dreaded moment for cancer patients and caregivers alike,” said Nancy Mantell, co-founder of Curident. “We created Curident because that moment deserves a better solution — something gentle, easy, and actually designed to bring dignity back to a simple daily task.”

Curident - The Only One Step Solution

Developed in close collaboration with chemists, oncology nurses, and dental professionals, Curident was designed to address both the physical and emotional toll of oral care during treatment. For caregivers managing the demands of supporting a loved one, it removes one more obstacle from an already overwhelming day, offering a moment of relief in a time when every bit of comfort matters.
