

Demand for Roof Repair in Orlando, FL Rises With Hurricane Season Start

Local Roofing Experts Warn Orange County Homeowners That the Window Between Storm Damage and Interior Water Loss Is Shorter Than Most Realize

ORLANDO, FL, UNITED STATES, June 23, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- With Florida's 2026 hurricane season now officially underway, roofing contractors across the Orlando metro area are reporting a measurable increase in homeowner inquiries following the first significant storm activity of the season.

Industry data consistently shows that

Central Florida experiences its highest volume of roof damage claims between June and October, a pattern driven by the convergence of tropical moisture, afternoon convective storms, and named hurricane events that track through the I-4 corridor.

Roofing professionals in Orange County note that one of the most persistent challenges during storm season is the gap between when damage occurs and when homeowners act on it. Wind-lifted shingles, compromised flashing, and failed underlayment do not always produce immediate interior symptoms. By the time a water stain appears on a ceiling, moisture has typically been present in the roof system for days or weeks. For homeowners seeking roof repair in Orlando, FL, early inspection is the most effective way to contain repair costs before they escalate into structural remediation.

One factor shaping the Orlando roof repair market this season is the growing homeowner awareness of inspection credentials. Insurance carriers in Florida have become more selective in how they evaluate storm damage claims, placing greater weight on inspection documentation produced by credentialed professionals. The HAAG Certified Inspector designation, recognized across the property insurance industry, trains inspectors to document hail impact patterns, wind damage characteristics, and lifted seal identification in a format that supports the claims review process from the first submission.

Roof Repair in Orlando, FL

Thomas Roofing and Repair, a licensed Central Florida roofing contractor operating under Florida License #CCC1333138, employs HAAG Certified Inspectors and is offering free storm damage roof inspections to homeowners throughout Orange, Seminole, Lake, Osceola, and Polk Counties for the duration of hurricane season. The company has completed thousands of residential and commercial roofing projects across the Central Florida market since its founding in 2018 and holds certifications from CertainTeed, Owens Corning, and SOPREMA.

"The homeowners who call us the day after a storm are in a much better position than those who wait three weeks. The difference is not just cost -- it is what the insurance carrier sees when they review the claim. A documented inspection within 48 hours of a weather event gives the adjuster a clear timeline. Waiting until interior damage is visible eliminates that advantage entirely."
