"I firmly believe that each and every woman deserves to see herself the way I see her, powerful, bold, beautiful, and worth celebrating," says Elili Brown, the founder of ELI Boudoir. "Almost every woman who walks into my studio tells me the same story, that they refrained from booking their boudoir shoot because of a pesky insecurity or because they wanted to wait for a better time. However, after their session, they realize that confidence is built during the boudoir photoshoot, it is not a prerequisite. My goal is to always make the experience feel as fun and comfortable as possible and for you to walk away with beautiful photographs that remind you every day of how stunning you are."
