

"Our goal is to make infrastructure invisible," said Aler Rab, Deputy CEO at Cloudzy. "Developers and AI builders should spend their time building products, not configuring servers. We originally set a goal of reaching 1,000 one-click applications by the end of 2026, but the pace of expansion has exceeded our expectations. We're now on track to achieve that milestone ahead of schedule while continuing to broaden the range of applications and software stacks available to our customers."

The company's roadmap includes curated multi-application environments tailored to AI automation, agentic workflows, e-commerce operations, DevOps pipelines, software development, data analytics, and other emerging use cases. By combining infrastructure and software deployment into a single workflow, Cloudzy aims to reduce setup times from hours to minutes.

Cloudzy operates across 13 regions in North America, Europe, APAC, and the Middle East. All plans run on AMD EPYC and Ryzen processors with pure NVMe storage and 40 Gbps network uplinks. Plans start at $2.48 per month with hourly billing and no egress charges.
