Sharon Appelbaum Named Among Los Angeles Business Journal's 2026 Women of Influence

"Sharon Appelbaum is a leading white collar criminal defense attorney whose work over the past year reflects a rare combination of courtroom advocacy, investigative strategy, and crisis management," writes the Los Angeles Business Journal. "Her practice is defined by early intervention, strategic clarity, and the ability to change the trajectory of a case before it fully develops."

The publication highlighted Appelbaum's representation of individuals and entities facing high-stakes federal and state investigations, as well as her recent success securing the dismissal of murder and conspiracy charges by challenging the prosecution's reliance on digital evidence. The profile also recognized her strategic approach to complex matters where legal exposure and reputational consequences are significant.

"Many clients come to us before charges are filed, when uncertainty is at its highest and the stakes are often life-changing," Appelbaum said. "Our role is to bring clarity to difficult situations, develop a strategic path forward, and protect our clients' futures. I am honored to be recognized
