Butler Specialty Company serves clients across multiple distribution channels, including e-commerce platforms, big box stores, interior designers, and the trade and hospitality sectors. Products are developed through an in-house design process and supported by a global manufacturing and sourcing network of 56 factories across six countries.

"The mission at Butler Specialty Company has always been to make each item 'the brightest spot in your room,'" said Mr. David Bergman, CEO of Butler Specialty Company. "With more than nine decades of global sourcing and product development experience, the company maintains a broad selection of styles and finishes that address the needs of trade clients across distribution channels."

New models are added to the catalog on a monthly basis, providing trade customers with ongoing access to updated designs, finishes, and configurations throughout the year. Materials available across the product line include premium wood grains, hardwoods, veneers, marble, stone, and metal finishes. Butler Specialty Company works with factories that adhere to environmental and ethical manufacturing standards, reflecting a commitment to responsible sourcing across its global supply chain.

For clients seeking customized product development, Butler Specialty Company works with businesses from concept through to production and drop-ship fulfillment — a process the company describes as a "Made by Butler, designed by you" experience. The in-house design team studies market trends, collaborates closely with manufacturing partners, and works with existing accounts to identify product gaps and address evolving client requirements.

"The company's global manufacturing network and in-house design capabilities allow clients to be involved at every stage of product development," Mr. Bergman added. "From concept and sketch to production and fulfillment, Butler Specialty Company provides the resources and expertise to bring furniture concepts to market."
