Dairy free cream liqueur is a type of cream liqueur made from nondairy milk such as almond milk, oat milk, and coconut milk. People suffering from medical conditions such as lactose intolerance or having dietary preferences such as veganism prefer dairy free cream liqueur. It differs from lactose-free cream liqueur, which is made with non-dairy milk source, whereas dairy free cream liqueur is entirely made of vegan milk and other vegan ingredients.

The global vegan population has increased dramatically in recent years. Consumers are adopting veganism to improve their dietary intake or to overcome food allergies or other health issues that prevent them from consuming animal-derived products. The vegan population is growing significantly in Europe, particularly in the UK, which has the world's largest vegan population as well as the highest demand for cream liqueur. Many engaged stakeholders in the food & beverage industry are developing vegan version of their products, including cream liqueurs, as the global vegan population grows. In addition, manufacturers are focused on introducing vegan cream liqueurs, which is expected to foster the Dairy Free Cream Liqueur Industry growth significantly.

As veganism is becoming more popular, many people are seeking for vegan cream liqueurs. Making vegan cream liqueurs at home is simple, and there are numerous recipes available on the internet that provide step-by-step instructions. Thus, consumers are increasing their consumption of homemade dairy free cream liqueurs due to the assurance of product quality and slightly lower costs associated with making such products at home. This increase in dairy free cream liqueur production by households has a negative impact on the dairy free cream liqueur market growth.
