Hosted by Creative Repute Founder Nile Livingston and Marketing Strategist Kristina Hernandez, the Unmistakable Podcast explores the systems, strategies, and decisions that shape trusted organizations and enduring brands. The podcast features conversations with leaders across the nonprofit, education, arts, government, and business sectors who are building meaningful work behind the scenes.

Businesses don't always need larger marketing budgets. They need meaningful opportunities to connect with the right audience”

Since its launch, UP has featured organizations including Mural Arts Philadelphia, ICS West, and Land Based Jawns, highlighting topics such as organizational growth, community engagement, public art, education, and long-term leadership.

Episodes are distributed across major podcast platforms, including Spotify, Apple Podcasts, YouTube, Amazon Music, Pandora, iHeart Podcasts, and more. New episodes are also promoted through Creative Repute's email newsletter, which reaches more than 25,000 subscribers, the majority located throughout the Greater Philadelphia region.

"Sponsorships allow us to continue expanding conversations that deserve a wider audience," said Nile Livingston, Founder and Creative Director of Creative Repute. "Our goal is to create a platform where thoughtful leadership, creativity, and community work receive the visibility they deserve while giving mission-driven organizations an opportunity to align with those conversations."

Organizations interested in sponsoring future episodes will have opportunities to connect with a regional audience of business owners, nonprofit professionals, artists, educators, entrepreneurs, and community leaders through podcast acknowledgments and related promotional opportunities.

Creative Repute also continues to accept applications from prospective podcast guests whose work aligns with the show's focus on leadership, strategy, creativity, and lasting impact.
