Dr. Satpreet Singh expressed his gratitude for the recognition and emphasized that the honor represents not an individual achievement but a shared commitment to serving the Sikh Panth through education, research, heritage preservation, and community development.

"Receiving this honor at the birthplace of Sahib Sri Guru Gobind Singh Ji Maharaj is a profound blessing and a humbling responsibility," said Dr. Satpreet Singh. "This recognition strengthens my commitment to advancing Sikh education, preserving our historical heritage, promoting ethical leadership, and creating opportunities for future generations. The true purpose of

He commended the Takhat Management Committee and the dedicated conservation team for their visionary work in safeguarding Sikh literary and religious heritage through professional conservation practices.

Dr. Satpreet Singh noted that preserving original Sikh manuscripts is an essential investment in the future of Sikh scholarship, historical research, and cultural preservation. He emphasized that combining traditional religious stewardship with modern conservation methods can help ensure that these invaluable treasures remain available for future generations.

The recognition also reflects Dr. Satpreet Singh's ongoing efforts to strengthen educational opportunities through the University of Khalsa, a higher education institution being established in the United States, and the Sikh Institute of Higher Education and Association, an organization dedicated to advancing educational excellence, leadership development, scholarly research, institutional collaboration, and preservation of Sikh heritage.

Among the long-term educational initiatives currently under development is the proposed Sikh Education School Board, a collaborative vision intended to encourage educational excellence, strengthen Sikh educational institutions, support teacher development, promote curriculum innovation, encourage youth leadership, and foster global academic collaboration while respecting institutional diversity and local autonomy.

Dr. Satpreet Singh emphasized that the future of Sikh education depends upon cooperation among Takhts, Gurdwaras, educational institutions, scholars, researchers, professionals, volunteers, and community organizations throughout the world.

"No single institution can accomplish these objectives alone. Through collaboration, shared knowledge, and collective leadership inspired by the teachings of the Sikh Gurus, we can strengthen Sikh education, preserve our heritage, empower future generations, and contribute meaningfully to society."

Throughout his visit to Patna Sahib, Dr. Satpreet Singh participated in discussions concerning Sikh education, leadership development, heritage preservation, and future opportunities for international collaboration among educational institutions and religious organizations dedicated to serving the Sikh Panth.

The visit further highlighted the growing importance of global partnerships focused on preserving Sikh history, expanding educational opportunities, encouraging scholarly research, and developing future leaders committed to the principles of equality, service, justice, and Sarbat da Bhala.
