Management Group, and directed by D. Dominique Perry and Naomi K. Bonman, is now available to stream on Prime Video, Tubi, YouTube, Apple TV, and Google Play. The film centers Black plus-size women in a timely story about friendship, identity, self-love, body diversity, and colorism, bringing visibility to voices and experiences too often pushed to the margins of film, fashion, and mainstream storytelling.

We wanted to tell a story that reflects real people, real bodies, and real experiences. Too often, women who do not fit traditional standards are overlooked, minimized, or cast aside.”

Lillie Mae Jones-Perry

At its core, Full-Figured Flings follows Amber and Lauren, two Black plus-size models whose friendship is tested after they uncover colorist practices within their modeling agency. As they take a stand against division and discrimination, they become symbols of empowerment and self-acceptance while also navigating personal challenges that threaten their bond. The film explores friendship, identity, self-love, visibility, resilience, and the complicated realities of being seen in industries that have historically excluded bodies, stories, and experiences like theirs.

For writer Lillie Mae Jones-Perry, the inspiration behind the project came from years of witnessing plus-size women portrayed through limiting stereotypes or excluded altogether from meaningful leading roles. The project was born from a desire to showcase full-figured women as multidimensional individuals whose stories deserve the same depth, romance, and prominence often afforded to others. “Purpose over popularity,” said Jones-Perry. “This film was created with intention. We wanted to tell a story that reflects real people, real bodies, and real experiences. Too often, women who do not fit traditional standards are overlooked, minimized, or cast aside. Full-Figured Flings exists to remind audiences that everyone deserves to see themselves as the lead character in their own story.”

The release of Full-Figured Flings comes at a time when conversations about representation continue to grow across the entertainment industry. While progress has been made, authentic portrayals of plus-size women, particularly Black women of varying shades, shapes, and backgrounds, remain limited. By placing these characters at the center of the narrative, the filmmakers hope to inspire broader conversations about beauty standards, inclusion, colorism, and the power of authentic storytelling.

Produced by Atlanta-based creatives and supported by a passionate independent film community, Full-Figured Flings demonstrates how storytelling can be both entertaining and transformative. The film's message resonates beyond the runway and beyond romance, challenging audiences to recognize the beauty, talent, and humanity that exist outside conventional standards.

Full-Figured Flings is now available to stream on Prime Video, Tubi, YouTube, Apple TV, and Google Play. Audiences are encouraged to watch, share, and join the conversation around representation, body positivity, colorism, and the importance of creating space for diverse stories and perspectives.
