the continued operation of its expanded manufacturing and retail presence in Franklin Borough, New Jersey, marking two years since the company expanded beyond its original Butler facility. The Franklin location was established to accommodate a growing customer base and provide additional capacity for the development of custom concrete structures. The expansion represents a continuation of the company's long-standing operations in northern New Jersey.

Founded in 1959 by Paul Monaco Sr., Peerless Concrete began by supplying septic tanks and concrete products to the regional market. In 1962, the company acquired the site of its current Butler manufacturing facility and began producing concrete products locally. Leadership of the family-owned business transitioned through successive generations, with Phil Monaco becoming the sole proprietor in 2012. “Our mission extends beyond supplying our customers with the highest quality concrete products to providing outstanding service, customer support, and innovative solutions,” said Phil Monaco, President and CEO of Peerless Concrete.

According to the company, the Franklin Borough expansion has provided additional manufacturing and retail capacity while supporting ongoing operations across its product lines, which include septic tanks, manholes, catch basins, grease traps, trench drains, and custom concrete structures. The company stated that the second location has also created opportunities to address evolving project requirements and continue serving residential, commercial, and municipal customers throughout the region.
