

All We Need Is Love Releases Inspirational Music Project Supporting Mental Health Awareness

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, July 1, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Prestigious Inspirational Entertainment Inc. is pleased to announce the release of All We Need Is Love, a long-awaited inspirational music project created to promote unity, kindness, mental health awareness, and suicide prevention through the universal language of music.

Years in the making, All We Need Is Love was developed by a collective of entertainment industry professionals, artists, and community advocates who shared a belief that music can open conversations, soften division, and remind people of their shared humanity. The project was placed on hold after several unexpected delays, including the untimely passing of executive producer and Co-Founder-Surefire Creative Group, Jared Hancock. Now, in honor of his legacy, the creative team has reunited to share the song and its message with audiences around the world.

Written by Capitol F.E.M.I. and produced by Vtek, the recording features performances by Bernard M. Walker, Aarion Pace Rhodes, and the acclaimed Virginia State University Gospel Chorus. Executive production was provided by Prestigious Inspirational Entertainment Inc. and the late Jared Hancock, whose vision and dedication helped guide the project from its earliest stages.

"This project is about humanity, unity, and reminding people that they matter," said a representative of Prestigious Inspirational Entertainment Inc. "Through every setback and challenge, the message remained the same: all we truly need is love. Jared believed deeply in the power of music to bring people together, and this release carries that belief forward."

The official music video expands the project's message through images of hope, compassion, diversity, and human connection. Featuring people from different backgrounds and communities, the video presents love as a universal force that can bridge distance, culture, and experience. The video also includes a special appearance by Emmy Award-winning television anchor and producer Tamani Wooley, whose community-focused work reflects the heart of the project.

One of the video's most meaningful moments features the widely shared sidewalk embrace between toddler best friends Maxwell Hanson and Finnegan McKenna. Originally captured in

New York City by Maxwell's father, Michael Cisneros, the moment became an international symbol of innocence, friendship, acceptance, and hope. Within the context of All We Need Is Love, the embrace serves as a reminder that compassion is often seen most clearly in its simplest form.

A portion of the proceeds from All We Need Is Love will benefit the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, supporting its work in suicide prevention, mental health education, advocacy, research, and resources for individuals, families, and communities affected by suicide. By connecting music with a broader purpose, the project seeks to encourage open conversations about mental health while helping reduce stigma surrounding those conversations.

The release is dedicated to the memory of Jared Hancock, whose compassion and belief in the healing power of creative work continue to inspire the people involved in the project. For the artists and production team, All We Need Is Love is more than a song. It is a message of remembrance, hope, and connection at a time when many people are searching for signs that they are not alone.
