"We've always believed that truck driving is a skilled trade, one that deserves the same recognition and professional training as any other craft. Lane County and the surrounding region have a strong tradition of hardworking tradespeople, and we're excited to bring that same standard to CDL training right here in the community. "We designed our CDL training program with one goal in mind: give every student the best possible chance to succeed. That means smaller class sizes, and a model where students work with the same instructor from day one in the classroom all the way through their road training. Our instructors don't just teach; they invest in every student they work with. That dedication is why Elite Truck School has one of the highest first-time CDL pass rates in Oregon, and it's the standard we'll bring to our new Eugene-area campus. As a veteran, I'm especially proud that we can offer that same world-class training to veterans and working adults in Lane County who are ready to build a career in the trades", said J.J. Reisnaur, Director of Operations.

The new Eugene area campus continues Elite Truck School's long-standing commitment to high-quality, personalized instruction and state-of-the-art equipment. The school works closely with industry partners, including trucking companies, WorkSource Oregon, the Veterans Administration, and the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, to help students access financial assistance and connect with employers upon graduation.
