We created Match My Type to challenge modern dating norms through authentic human connection, not engineered drama. The goal is to spark conversations that continue long after the credits roll.”

have released the official trailer for Match My Type, an independent reality dating series taking a different approach to the genre by challenging modern dating norms through authentic conversations and psychological compatibility rather than engineered drama.

As reality dating shows continue to rely on conflict and spectacle, Match My Type explores how attraction, personal preferences, and relationship patterns shape meaningful connections. The central question of the series is: Is your type the reason you're still single?

The trailer launches the show's national promotional campaign as Match My Type seeks streaming distribution and introduces audiences to a relationship-focused format that encourages conversation beyond the screen.

"We created Match My Type to challenge modern dating norms through authentic human connection, not engineered drama," said Victor Silas, Executive Producer. "Our goal is to spark conversations that continue long after the credits roll."

The official trailer is now available on YouTube. Follow @officialmatchmytype on Instagram for updates, exclusive content, and future announcements.
