

Wednesdae Reim Ifrach Releases Hex and Flesh Poetry Collection

A poetic spellbook and grimoire exploring the sacred, haunted intersections of feminine, non-binary, and genderqueer embodiment.

NY, UNITED STATES, July 20, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The official publication of Hex & Flesh: 35 Incantations of Queer Becoming, a transformative new collection of poetry by acclaimed author, artist, and clinician Wednesdae Reim Ifrach through Rebel Satori Press. Crafted as a poetic spellbook, this breathtaking grimoire explores the raw, luminous landscapes of the feminine, haunted, and genderqueer body.

Hex & Flesh represents a radical act of self-sovereignty, casting away societal binaries to reclaim the Flesh through ink, lineage, and ritual. Written from the intimate perspective of an AFAB (assigned female at birth) genderqueer creator, the book moves beyond the edge of traditional language. It challenges systems of erasure, beautifully transforming vulnerabilities into individual spells, protective circles, and triumphant declarations of autonomy.

Spanning 35 carefully woven incantations, the collection navigates the sacred boundaries of personal evolution. From the visceral permanence of tattooing in "Ink is My Gender" and "Tattoo Me Like a Map" to the mystical intersections of witchcraft and self-worth in "Tarot Spread in Lipstick" and "My Chest is an Altar", Ifrach constructs a multi-layered sanctuary on the page. The poems act as deliberate doorways, inviting readers to speak them aloud, step into their own power, and honor their personal histories.

Evocative, fierce, and deeply comforting, Hex & Flesh serves as a sanctuary and an essential counter-narrative for the haunted, the queer, and the healing. It reminds us that identity is an ongoing, beautiful performance of self-discovery.

"Scuff marks and sequins"—author Wednesdae Reim Ifrach celebrates body liberation and queer joy in their new collection.

The collection is available in trade paperback format worldwide directly through Rebel Satori Press and major independent literary distribution networks.
