Through the partnership, employees connected through Tuition.io will have expanded access to ACHS's accredited online programs in integrative health and wellness, including online degrees, certificates, continuing education courses, and micro-credentials designed for working adult learners and wellness professionals.

This partnership helps create additional opportunities for working professionals to pursue accredited online education in a way that supports their long-term personal and professional goals.”

Ilana Rose Frigaard, COO

The ACHS and Tuition.io partnership supports employees seeking flexible online education pathways through employer-sponsored tuition assistance and workforce education benefits. Eligible learners may explore online programs in areas including herbal medicine, aromatherapy, holistic nutrition, wellness coaching, and integrative health while continuing to work and balance personal responsibilities.

More information about the partnership is available at the ACHS Tuition.io partnership page.

Supporting Workforce Education and Professional Growth

“88% of employees now value their wellbeing at work as much as their salary,” according to the Workplace Wellbeing Initiative of the Global Wellness Institute. At a time when nearly every industry is facing labor shortages and increased competition in recruiting, employee education benefits and wellness programs are impactful levers for employers to support their organizations.

This partnership reflects growing interest in flexible online education that supports workforce upskilling, career mobility, employee retention, and lifelong learning – including programs in wellness and innovative learning models that support workers such as online learning.

“At ACHS, we understand that many adult learners are balancing education alongside careers, families, and other responsibilities,” said Ilana Rose Frigaard, Chief Operating Officer at ACHS. “This partnership helps create additional opportunities for working professionals to pursue accredited online education in a way that fits into their lives while supporting their long-term personal and professional goals.”

The partnership comes at a time when employers across healthcare, wellness, and corporate industries are placing greater focus on preventative health, employee well-being, continuing education, and workforce resilience.

Flexible Online Education for Working Adults

Founded in 1978, ACHS specializes in online integrative health and wellness education with programs focused on herbal medicine, aromatherapy, holistic nutrition, wellness coaching, and integrative health. ACHS serves students globally through flexible online learning rooted in evidence-based education, sustainability, and whole-person wellness.

ACHS programs are designed for working professionals, career changers, wellness practitioners, and adult learners seeking flexible online education pathways that align with evolving workforce needs and professional development goals.

“Education can create lasting impact not only for individuals, but also for the communities and organizations they serve,” said Tracey Abell, President of ACHS. “We’re excited to partner with Tuition.io to help more learners access flexible education pathways that support career growth, lifelong learning, and meaningful work in wellness and integrative health.”

“ACHS is our first partner in holistic and integrative health education, and a natural addition to our portfolio,” said Jeni Burckart, Vice President of Healthcare and Workforce Services at Tuition.io. “With more than 45 years of accredited experience, ACHS gives our employer partners a trusted, proven option for employees pursuing wellness-focused careers.”

Tuition.io partners with employers to design and manage education assistance benefits — including tuition assistance and student loan contributions — to reduce barriers to education, build workforce skills, and support internal career mobility.

ACHS offers undergraduate, graduate, doctoral, certificate, and continuing education programs through a fully online model designed for adult learners and working professionals. The institution is accredited by the Distance Education Accrediting Commission (DEAC), has provided online education for more than 45 years, and is a Certified B Corporation.
