Investors Ask Questions in Real Time and Request One-on-One Meetings with Management Teams

“

On July 9, the executives running these technology companies are live, taking questions, and B2i Digital is putting the full weight of our network behind reaching the right audience.”

David Shapiro, CEO of B2i Digital, Inc.

The lineup spans AI drones delivered as a service, quantum computing software, deep-tech materials for product authentication and industrial decarbonization, phosphate for LFP batteries, subscription bundling and payments, digital pharmacy, carrier-neutral data centers, online trading platforms, and peer-to-peer sports prediction markets.

Each company has 30 minutes for a live presentation and Q&A. One-on-one meetings with management can be requested through the conference platform, and replays are posted to the B2i Digital and OTC Markets YouTube channels.

Before, during, and after the day, B2i amplifies the event across its platform. That puts these technology companies in front of a proprietary network of more than 1.7 million retail and institutional market participants. It is the same visibility engine that has carried presenting companies From Marketing to MeetingsSM at more than 120 investor conferences.

“Investors already live with these technologies every day: drones overhead, data centers behind every app, subscriptions on the phone bill, and prediction markets in the headlines. On July 9, the executives running those companies are live, taking questions, and my team at B2i Digital is putting the full weight of our network and reputation behind getting them in front of the right audience,” said David Shapiro, Chief Executive Officer of B2i Digital.
