Training Resources \(VTR\), a leader in aviation training technology, is pleased to announce a new partnership with

Kalitta Air to support training across both its Flight Operations and Maintenance divisions. This agreement will deploy VTR's proprietary FlightDeckToGo® virtual reality (VR) platform across Kalitta Air's Boeing 777 fleet, delivering immersive, technology-driven training solutions for pilots and maintenance technicians alike.

For Flight Operations, FlightDeckToGo® will help Kalitta's pilots familiarize themselves with the B777 flight deck through guided in-headset instruction, allowing them to learn and rehearse procedures and flows before entering the simulator while improving readiness and accelerating training progression.

For maintenance training, VTR's platform will provide immersive, accessible learning to Kalitta technicians, providing a virtual environments that support engine start training and abnormalities without the need for access to the simulator or actual aircraft.

Andrea Arola, VTR's vice president of sales, commented: "We're thrilled to welcome Kalitta Air as a partner. Their decision to adopt VR-based training across both Flight Operations and Maintenance reflects a genuine commitment to innovation and training excellence. We're excited to see the impact this collaboration will have across their B777 operation, and we look forward to growing this partnership."

Kendall Leake, Kalitta Air EFB Manager/Flight Training IT Applications, commented, "I'm excited to partner with Visionary Training Resources to use their innovative technology to boost the confidence and training outcomes of our pilots and maintenance technicians. I look forward to this partnership and to watching it grow."

This partnership reinforces VTR's continued expansion within the aviation VR training industry, further establishing FlightDeckToGo® as a comprehensive solution for operators seeking to modernize training across multiple divisions.

About Visionary Training Resources
