

14-Year-Old Author Sutton Lewis Unveils 'Legends Unearthed: The Hunt for Yamashita's Gold', Blending History and Fiction

DALLAS, TX, UNITED STATES, July 11, 2026

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Fourteen Year old author Sutton Lewis has released 'Legends Unearthed: The Hunt for Yamashita's Gold', the first installment in a new middle-grade adventure series that combines historical inspiration, mystery, friendship, and action. The novel draws on the enduring legend of Yamashita's Gold while introducing readers to an original story designed to encourage curiosity, teamwork, and perseverance.

The book follows four friends whose summer vacation changes after they uncover a notebook linked to the legendary treasure of General Tomoyuki Yamashita. Their search takes them across the Philippines, where hidden tunnels, ancient traps, caves, and long-buried secrets create an adventure that connects historical intrigue with fast-paced storytelling. The release offers young readers a new fiction title that blends entertainment with an interest in history and exploration.

mysteries connected to World War II.

Inspired by the long-standing legend of Yamashita's Gold, the novel incorporates real historical elements into a fictional narrative. The Philippine setting plays an important role throughout the story, with its landscapes, culture, and geography helping shape the journey while creating an immersive reading experience for middle-grade audiences.

Research and Authenticity Behind the Novel

History has long been a personal interest for Sutton. Before writing the novel, he spent approximately nine months researching World War II, Filipino culture, geography, and the historical stories surrounding Yamashita's Gold. That preparation supports a storyline that encourages readers to explore history beyond the pages of the book while enjoying an engaging work of fiction. The combination of historical inspiration, puzzle-solving, and character-driven storytelling offers an experience suited to readers who enjoy adventurous series with educational value.

A Debut Shaped by Determination

At just fourteen years old, Sutton has already demonstrated a commitment to creative writing and historical research. Diagnosed with dyslexia during fourth grade, he chose to pursue his interest in storytelling despite the challenges he encountered along the way. Reflecting on his experience, Sutton hopes his journey encourages others to believe in their own potential.

"Writing this book was an adventure all by itself. As someone with dyslexia, I never thought I would someday finish writing an entire novel. If you have ever struggled in school or doubted yourself, I hope this story reminds you that determination and imagination can take you farther than you think." said Sutton Lewis, Author.

As the opening title in the Legends Unearthed series, the novel establishes a foundation for future adventures that will continue exploring history, mystery, and global discoveries through the eyes of young protagonists. Here is a recent article published about the book.
