

Hollywood Studios™ Launches Private Beta of the Trusted Platform for the Global Creative Industry

Secure Collaboration. Secure AI. Intellectual Property Protection. Smarter Decisions.

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, July 15, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Hollywood Studios™ today announced the launch of its initial private beta, introducing a trusted platform that brings together creators and entertainment professionals in a secure ecosystem designed to foster trusted relationships, enable secure collaboration, responsibly leverage AI, protect intellectual property, maintain privacy, support a secure chain of title to help strengthen copyright protection, and enable smarter creative and business decisions.

The invitation-only beta begins with a select group of industry professionals and marks the first phase of a broader rollout that will expand over the coming weeks and months across the global creative community.

"The creative industry has never had a trusted digital home built specifically for creators and the professionals who support them," said Sir Steven Saxton, Founder & CEO. "Hollywood Studios brings the creative community together on one trusted platform where people can connect, collaborate, responsibly leverage AI, protect intellectual property, and make smarter creative and business decisions. We believe trust will be the foundation of the next generation of the global creative industry."

The company has begun its initial private beta with a select group of invited members and will expand access in phases as additional capabilities are introduced. Additional announcements will follow in the coming weeks.
