Every material choice, every finish, every color was a conversation with the homeowners, and that process is what brought this bathroom together.”

NARI announced the national winners on April 23, 2026, during its Evening of Excellence celebration in Tempe, Arizona. This year's competition recognized 40 national winners selected from 159 Regional Remodeler of the Year Award recipients representing more than $138 million in remodeling projects across the United States. Both Lamont Bros. projects first earned Regional RotY Awards in NARI Region 6 before advancing to the national competition.

Award-Winning Portland Bathroom Remodel Centers on a Custom Teak Soaking Tub

The award-winning bathroom remodel, located in Portland, was designed around an imported teak Japanese soaking tub that the homeowners selected before the design process began.

Because the handcrafted tub could not be installed as a conventional plumbing fixture, the design team classified it as an accessory fixture and engineered a concealed drainage system that allows the tub to free-drain into the adjacent shower through a linear shadow drain.

The sloped shower floor presented another engineering challenge. Working with a local metal fabricator, the team designed custom steel feet that keep the tub perfectly level while elevating it above the shower floor.

Natural materials define the rest of the space, including a cedar plank ceiling, grain-matched teak cabinetry, leathered Dekton countertops, and Marmoleum flooring chosen for its warm feel underfoot and sustainable composition.

To honor the homeowners' commitment to sustainability, the team preserved and incorporated several original features that remained in excellent condition, including the oversized vanity mirror and the home's distinctive push-button light switches.

Award-Winning Basement Remodel Creates a Flexible Space for a Growing Family

The second national award recognized a basement remodel in Portland's West Portland Park neighborhood that transformed an underused lower-level living room into a flexible family space designed around the homeowners' young son.

The layout easily transitions between an active play area, an art studio, and an occasional guest room while staying within the family's budget.

Its centerpiece is a professional-grade climbing wall with interchangeable climbing holds. Ceiling-mounted hooks support hammocks, rope ladders, and swings that can be swapped out as interests change, while a custom-built wall unit combines an art desk, toy and game storage, and a concealed Murphy bed for overnight guests.

The finished basement has since become a neighborhood gathering place, regularly welcoming children from surrounding homes.
